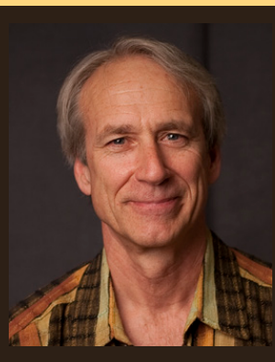
As therapists, to be invited on a couple's journey of transformation is a profound honor and opportunity. This workshop is an invitation to catalyze your "self -at-best" in everyday sessions.

Videotape of live sessions will bring you into the practice of AEDP for Couples. Therapists who are new to Accelerated Experiential Dynamic Psychotherapy or AEDP for Couples will find this as engaging as those who are experienced AEDP or EFT practitioners. We will be bringing these two worlds together as we track moment-to-moment somatic experience throughout the afternoon. AEDP for COUPLES deepens mindful awareness and summons intimacy through the process of healing trauma.

- Light up neural networks for attachment-that-feels-good which have been dark or dim for years
- Foster justifiable hope in your anxiously attached clients who can't live in the "desert" of their marriage one day longer
- Evoke and amplify the experience of love even in couples who are in the "avoid-avoid" phase when there is "no more love to give"
- Find and open channels to help your avoidant clients experience being competent, respected and capable as loving partners



David Mars, Ph.D. is the developer of AEDP FOR COUPLES. He has specialized in the somatically focused treatment of couples and groups for over three decades. He has trained and consulted closely with Diana Fosha since 2005. David is a Senior Faculty member of the AEDP Institute and is a founding member of AEDP West. David receives strong reviews from audiences for his palpable love of AEDP and for helping participants to open to the experience the work through all the senses of the body.
